LEVEL LAND — "Keep the family on the farm, and keep the farm in the family", was the theme of the displays when the Acme, Beiseker and Carbon Junior Grain clubs and Avondale Forage club, were represented at the Junior Seed Fair held in the Memorial hall at Acme Oct. 25. Judging commenced at 10 o'clock, and the fair officially opened at 1:30 p.m.

Mayor W. A. Greenway of Acme, as chairman, gave the welcome address, and W. S. Backman showed pictures in relation to club work. Marjorie Parks, also of Acme, favored the gathering with a solo.

Then came the judge's report, given by J. E. Birdsall. Most of the samples this year were very poor due to frost and other odd weather conditions. Out of the three clubs and 43 members with samples, only two were of good enough quality to be placed in the Drumheller show. Both samples were from the Carbon club, and the winners were Vivian Sigmund with first and Marjorie Leiske, who took second.

Another solo was given by Ervin Klassen, and Mr. Robertson spoke on the thematic display.

Continuous hard work was put into the displays and they showed it. First prize was awarded to Acme and Carbon took second honor.

Other speakers were N. F. Bell, district agriculturalist; W. D. McDonald, president of the Drumheller district Agricultural Society; R. M. Ward, principal of the Acme High School; and Miss Shatz.

It was moved by Mr. Ward that the district Agricultural Society ask the Department of Education to recognize and give credits for the knowledge in agriculture obtained through club work.

The Avondale Forage club had a wonderful display arranged. Sheaves of all the forage crops, grown by each member were shown. Minnie Mae Howe, Swallow, took first honors, and D. J. Buyer of Carbon was second.

WILL HE RUN AGAIN? The present Parliament of Canada was only elected in June, 1949, and can stay in power another two and a half years if the Liberal party decides to wait that long for a new election. But current talk is rife about a June, 1952 election and speculation about candidates in Quebec involves Fred Rose, Communist. Rose has just been released from jail and is free to run for Parliament again as a free citizen.

Pink and white streamers and numerous flowers decorated the bride's table at the reception held later at the Empress grill.

Edmonton Responded Well

The day was cold, damp and a light rain was falling. Premier Manning spoke truly when he said the weather was unusual. It would have been more usual if the weather man had given us either a warm October day, Indian Summer style, or else 10 above zero with no rain but more snow. In spite of the weather, the people of Edmonton came out of their warm, dry homes to welcome their Royal Highnesses in the traditionally enthusiastic but reserved manner.

Mayor Parsons, beset by a fast-approaching Civic election could be excused for forgetting to speak into the microphone at the Legislative steps. Princess Elizabeth read a speech in faultless English, right into the speaker—a speech so well written that it could have come from a typewriter in the Department of Economic Affairs right here in Edmonton. Premier Manning, throughout the ceremonies calm, collected and apparently master of the situation, was obviously unnerved after he had escorted Her Royal Highness to the Cadillac. A slight delay in the departure of the big plastic topped car left him for a few moments on the horns of a dilemma. Whether to wait until the Royal car had pulled away or go directly to their own car with Mrs. Manning was the Premier's problem. There are times when the mightiest man among us is made to feel like a bashful teen-ager on his first date.

At Colonel Mewburn Hospital Elizabeth and Philip did chat with a few folks on the common level and this always makes for good feelings when Royalty meets and talks with the people. They attended the football game where even the Eskis responded with a smashing victory over the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Always too confident to do much boasting, the people of Edmonton did well by the Royal Visitors. The next time they come here we hope they'll be able to stay long enough to know us.

Wanted: More Royalty

Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh have been and gone. Edmonton was in the mood for celebration — and "a good time was had by all." For many it meant hours of dreary, motionless standing in the cold rain, for but a fleeting look at the Royal couple. To more fortunate citizens it meant actual participation in the ceremonies, the appearances and the banquet with the honoured visitors.

Somehow or other, the Royal family seems very remote from our Canadian way of life. Idealizing, as it does, a united loyalty to our British-born democratic manner of government, we should have more Royal appearances in Canada. In the days when it took six weeks to cross the Atlantic and a trip overland 3,000 miles was unthinkable the system of having a member of the Royal family visit Canada once in a lifetime was undoubtedly the most practical way to deal with Royalty.

Now, however, the King of Canada is only a few hours away at all times by air from our shores and appearances of the Royal family should be as frequent as once a year. The Duke of Windsor is no longer acceptable as a representative of the Crown to Canada, but what about his other brother, the Duke of Gloucester?

If we are going to preserve our allegiance to the British Crown, even only in name, we must have the co-operation of members of the Royal family who are willing and able to come here and spend some time in this country.

Reclaiming Australian Desert

While Alberta is busy establishing irrigation districts for good, productive land that lacks only a dependable year-in, year-out rainfall, the government of another member of the Commonwealth is tackling somewhat similar problems.

A project to reclaim half a million acres of desert land is now underway in South Australia. Unlike, most deserts, this area is not short of moisture but the soil is deficient in certain essential plant foods. By adding small quantities of the trace elements copper and zinc the area can be made quite productive. As the land is fertilized it is seeded down to grasses and converted into individual farms for production of sheep or dairy cattle.

Price Control

Tremendous pressure is being brought upon the Canadian government to enact price control laws to prevent further rises in the cost of living. While the government has been loath to take such action, cabinet ministers have hinted that public opinion may force them to do so.

In the midst of public discussion on this question, H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, made very plain the opinion of farm organizations on the subject. Said Mr. Hannam:

"If any government thought of clamping price controls on food without at the same time putting controls on profits and wages, it is going to hear from the farmers. Organized agriculture will fight. The government will have a bigger row on its hands than it now has with the clamor for price control."

Mr. Hannam pointed out that food prices today are not high in relation to other prices, or in relation to wage rates, or the profits being made by industry. Most food in terms of work required to purchase it, is cheaper than it has ever been. This fact is borne out by a comparison of average earnings in industry and average prices for staple food.

Others who can control their production and who set or help to establish their price or wage levels, said Mr. Hannam, have been more responsible for the high price structure of today than the farmer.

Speaking of the proposal that food be subsidized, Mr. Hannam said, "Why should subsidies on food be urged and not subsidies on other things. It is humiliating for the farmer to be picked out as the only one who is not entitled to a fair exchange value for his product in the market place."

De-Centralizing Local Government

Considerable interest has been evoked by the recent removal of the Sturgeon School Division offices for the Morinville district from the City of Edmonton to Morinville. The Municipal District office was already located in Morinville, for the Municipal District of Morinville, but the neighboring Municipal District of Sturgeon has had and still have their offices on Jasper Avenue.

The largest settlement within the boundaries of the Sturgeon Municipal District is at Gibbons, and a number of residents and rate-payers feel that the Municipal District offices should be located there. Others would like to see the office re-located in North Edmonton.

All this indicates a trend away from centralization in the big city, but this undoubtedly poses a problem for staff members who by moving are obliged to either give up their city homes or drive many miles daily to and from the office 20 or more miles away from home.

At the rate Edmonton is growing, we may expect to see towns such as St. Albert, Morinville, Gibbons and Fort Saskatchewan become very close neighbors to the city by virtue of the latter's expanding boundaries due to ever-growing population. Perhaps within the life span of most of us Edmonton will absorb these communities. A population of 300,000 within ten years is not unlikely and if in twenty years Edmonton has half a million population we can count on these communities becoming much bigger, too, although by that time they'll be merely in the city suburbs.

Plan For Road Research

The thirty-second convention of the Good Roads Association of Canada is to be held in Toronto Nov. 1 and 3, and it is expected there will be 1,000 members present, all of whom are interested in the building of good roads in all the ten provinces of the dominion.

In the matter of good roads, of modern construction, most parts of Canada are far behind the times. There is need for wider consideration and assistance for road building in Alberta in the interest of agriculture and the growth of industry, as well as for the sake of defence in case of war. If ever the tide of war sweeps onto Canadian soil the means of rapid transportation of army personnel and equipment may mean the difference between defeat and victory.

Hon. G. E. Taylor is to be a delegate at the Good Roads convention and it is to be hoped he will take a constructive view of proposals to be broached for the establishment of a research institute for highway construction in Canada. Alberta needs more and better roads in order that the growing prosperity of the province may be better served.

My Letter To Princess Elizabeth

By T. W. PUE

Dear Elizabeth:

You don't know me, but some day you may be Queen of England and someday I may be your Canadian Prime Minister. You have a good chance of being queen. I have a chance of being prime minister, but the odds are so against me that I never give it a second thought. If I were prime minister, though, I would like to talk to you as Disraeli is reported to have spoken to your great-grandmother. When, in a huff, she reminded him "Sir, do not forget I am the Queen of England." He replied, "Madam, do not forget I am the people of England."

On Saturday you with your handsome husband were in the midst of a quarter-million residents of Northern Alberta. To thousands of children of all ages you were the fairy Princess who stepped in to their midst for moments because a few brief moments. Yes, they were only moments, because although you spent nine hours in Edmonton, hardly anyone got more than a passing glimpse of you.

I was one of the lucky ones who saw you step off the train at the CNR station. I hotfooted abreast—about ten paces away, with a group of reporters and photographers. Those men, like myself, were intent on getting actual photographs and word pictures that would convey to our people a picture of the future Queen mingling with the people, and yet retaining her royal dignity. You saw me standing—although you did not, of course, recognize me in any way at the legislative buildings. You and your husband stood but a foot from the group of reporters who carefully observed your every movement while in front of the legislative buildings.

I saw you as the big Cadillac pulled away, saw you through the plastic roof of your car. Some mud had gotten on the back of your dainty little right shoe and you were rubbing it off with your glove.

I saw this as the eyes and ears of the thousands of people who read our papers. I have to report I am one of the luckiest guys in the country. I was indeed privileged to get such a good view of Your Royal Highnesses. Truly, you were the Princess of Canada, and insofar as my newspaper readers are concerned, I represent the people of Canada.

A TIRING TRIP

When I saw you, I sensed that this was a tiring trip. There was no thrill left in it for you. You had made so many public appearances in the last few weeks we couldn't blame you for feeling tired but, Elizabeth, Edmonton was just beaming with excitement. To them it was your first appearance. And, frankly, I did not feel that either you or the Duke responded to that feeling.

I was sorry that in the few moments you had on the legislative steps, waiting for the rest of the official party to drive up, you and your husband did not make the rounds of the children who had been standing motionless a long, long time for you to arrive. The Duke did speak to one or two, and you did wave your hand to the crowd a few times—but you had the time to really meet a good number of young Canadians—and you missed the opportunity.

I had read an earlier report that in an Eastern hospital the Duke of Edinburgh had looked at an ex-serviceman who had lost both arms and both legs. One of you only LOOKED at him. Did it occur to you that you both should have walked up to that man, put your hand on the stump of one arm, and thanked him on behalf of all of us for the sacrifice he had made? I remembered how, years before, your Uncle David leaned over and kissed the misshapen face of a veteran who had given all but life for his country, with tears in his eyes, and I could weep at the opportunity you both had missed on this occasion.

Near the beginning of your present Canadian tour a young man displayed a great deal of courage and ingenuity and pushed himself right up to your Royal person and asked for your autograph. If, instead of saying "no", you had given him your signature and a short, kind word of reproof for his boldness, not a single Canadian would have found fault with you. We Canadians are always happy when the underdog comes out on top. Protocol or no protocol.

I wish you had planned on spending a month in Alberta. I wish you had been here long enough to meet the people. No doubt you have learned a lot in your short lifetime, but you have not learned the greatest lesson of all—the lesson of meeting people. They are the most interesting subject in all the lesson books. But you don't learn it in books—you learn this by meeting people.

When you meet President Truman in Washington, you'll meet a man who epitomizes Greatness in the midst of the common man, the little man, the man of the street. I am sorry the Duke of Edinburgh did not "kick-off" for the players at Saturday night's football game. We would have loved him for it, even if the soles of his shoes did get a bit of mud on them. But when you see Harry Truman, just remember that he threw in the first ball for a recent baseball game and the Canadian and American people heartily approved.

For the rest of your Canadian tour, Elizabeth, how about a change of routine? If I were you, I'd absolutely insist on having dinner with a coal miner's family in Cape Breton. I'd be royally indignant if I couldn't visit a potato farmer on Prince Edward Island. And if it meant getting back to England a few days later I'd see to it that for the rest of my Canadian tour I met the common people of Canada. Many of our people are new Canadians, not steeped as I have been in traditional loyalty to the British crown. You've been sent here to sell yourself and the High Purposes to which God has called you to the people of Canada. Elizabeth, be a good saleswoman.

Because I write you this letter, Elizabeth, please not not take offense. If your battery of secretaries lets you read it. There are scores of other newspaper writers who would like to write what I have written, but they don't dare because they are working for someone else who could fire them. I am working for myself because I am publisher of my own papers.

Some Canadians—perhaps some writers—will criticize me. But this is a case where "your best friend won't tell you" so even if I'm not your best friend I hope you'll consider me one of your best Canadian friends. Because, in my own blundering way I've tried to tell you what one Canadian honestly thinks about your tour of this country we love.

And to prove my sincerity I am closing this letter in exactly the same way I would if writing to any other good friend that deserves my honest opinion and highest respects.

With every good wish, I am,
Sincerely yours,
Bill Pue.

REPLY TO RILEY

Dear Sir—So the poor tired businessman thinks farmers lead the Life of Riley! Apparently he has never been outside the city limits. I am not a farmer, but I drive through eight miles of farming country every morning on my way to work, and I can assure that silly letter writer that the farmers are all up and about their chores at that time.

Downed Flyers Rescued After Being Lost 4 Days

Two men who spent four days and nights shivering in sub-zero weather beside their downed plane in Northeastern Alberta were evacuated Saturday.

The aircraft, missing five days, was found by an Indian Saturday with its two occupants uninjured, although suffering from the cold weather.

A Royal Canadian Air Force mercy plane dropped rations, blankets and a stove at Gypsy Lake, 35 miles east of McMurray, Alta., where the single-engine Stinson aircraft of the McMurray Air Services made an emergency landing. The men were able to get warm while evacuation plans were being made.

The plane disappeared last Tuesday on a 200-mile flight north-east from McMurray to Goldfields, Sask. Aboard were pilot W. J. L.

In Army But Draws Baby Bonus

The Canadian Army has a soldier still drawing the baby bonus on top of his regular pay.

The father of one of three men who escaped from the Prince of Wales Armouries in Edmonton told authorities his boy is only 15.

The lad, who went AWOL from Camp Shilo, Man., last August, gave himself up three days ago, then sneaked away with two companions yesterday.

A quick check by the army disclosed the youth had offered proof of age with a baptismal certificate he had borrowed from a friend. The Army said the boy will be discharged just as soon as he is apprehended.

As United Nations Begins 7th Year Fear of War Heightens World Tension

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 26—(BUP)—The United Nations started its seventh year with world-wide celebrations of its birth while its secretariat and delegations converged on Paris in preparation for what could be its most momentous general assembly session.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie declared in a UN day message Wednesday that although the "fear of a world war worse than any other in history" dominates the world scene, the UN still can be proud of its work during the last six years.

"The fear of a world war worse than any other in history—unfortunate symptom of the present international tension—is still the most predominant factor in the international scene and also evidence that the Reds for which the UN was created have not been fully realized," Lie said in his statement released here.

"Great, and in some respects, successful efforts have, however, been made by the UN to prevent war, to promote the peaceful settlement of disputes and to serve as the channel of cooperative action toward the achievement of economic and social progress."

Referee Jack Appel and judge Charley Rozen saw King's boxing as the chief factor and voted him the victor. However, judge Nick Gamboli voted five rounds to Davis, four for King, and one even.

King of Toronto weighed 134½ to 132½ for Davis of Hartford, Conn. The widely televised bout drew an attendance of only 932 and a gate of $1,900 on a rainy night.

CBC IN DEBT

OTTAWA—The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had a deficit of $1,271,000 at the end of its 1950-51 operations.

Revenue Minister J. J. McCann tabled the corporation's annual report in parliament for the year ending March 31st. The deficit included depreciation and obsolescence charges "and preliminary expenses in connection with the development of television."

GRACE OLAFSON works in what is probably the safest place on earth. She is custodian of the safety deposit boxes in The Bank of Nova Scotia's new general office building, Toronto, where the first atomic-blast proof vaults have been constructed. Miss Olafson is seen beside one of the 55-ton doors that has two feet of solid metal thickness. Walls of the vaults are three foot reinforced concrete.

A Solid Citizen Sees the Princess and Prince As the Royal Procession Tours Edmonton

To those beings, People, I am known as the Edmonton Sun or the Community Publications building.

Both rather nice names, too, for from them I conjure pictures of the pulsing life of the city and the many cosy hamlets and villages peopled with friends. I'm not one of your cold, imposing skyscraper varieties, but prefer to cuddle comfortably with my neighbors along Whyte Avenue. No, we're not tall, we buildings along the avenue, but that doesn't stop us from keeping up appearances. Not so long ago I had my face done a new beige stucco and mock stone effect. It's very effective with my bright, red trimmed windows.

I'm not a very old building, and with my "love-of-imagining," it's rather a handicap so that's why today is so special. You see, this is Saturday, October 27 and in a short while Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip are going to drive right past me.

I've been dreaming about this for weeks. People say the Princess is much more lovely in person than in her pictures and that the Duke is much more handsome.

Those members of the fourth estate who bustle about in the confines of my walls have the radio going and we're listening to accounts of the tour of the royal couple. About all those announcers can say is "Listen to the crowd," and, "Isn't she lovely!" Ah, there is a lady commentator. Now we'll find out what they are wearing.

The Princess has chosen a raspberry suit with a straight cut skirt and a tailored, nipped in jacket for her appearance in Edmonton. It's black velvet trim is a complement to the becoming velvet cloche, adorned by a matching bow at the side, which fits snugly over her light brown curls.

Over her shoulders she wears a shawl of rich, dark mink with luxuriously full, cuffed sleeves and completing her costume are low, black walking shoes which tie in tiny bows, and matching gloves. The Duke is wearing his naval uniform with its gold braid.

My, I'm glad the radio people put a woman on. Those men have no idea of clothes.

Crowds are starting to gather in front of me but they can't get above my false front so I'll be able to see quite well. They chose the area in front of me for school children and their parents. It's just about time for the royal procession, and now there is a solid triple row of youngsters and their parents before me. Every one seems to have flags to wave. They are rather amusing, too, those flags. It seems the smaller the youngster the bigger the flag.

Oh, oh, there is a poor father holding his child who is clutching a very large flag. It keeps blowing across his face and he can't see a thing. I hope the breeze doesn't whisk it across his face when the Princess goes by.

There's the throb of some motor-cycles. Someone just yelled "They are coming"—No, it's three, white-clad members of the Alberta Motor Association. I guess they are checking to see that the road is clear.

While we wait, it's drizzling and some of the children are getting restless while others are practising waving their flags. There are diversions from these activities as periodically a car goes by filled with policemen of all services.

There come four more motor-cycles. These are ridden by members of the City Police Force in their official looking, navy blue serge uniforms, and they are grinning sheepishly as they ride by. On my left, the sounds of cheering are beginning to well around the corner mingled with the faint bark and throb of motor-cycles and the hum of automobile motors.

And there they are!

Simultaneously with the cheers and excited flag waving, two outriders of the RCMP motor-cycle squad round the corner, followed by the royal limousine. The car is a black convertible style with a plexi-glass top which is glistening with rain drops. Clustered about it are six more RCMP outriders, their short navy topcoats covering their red jackets.

The royal car is moving rapidly toward me. The Princess is on my side and I'm sure she's looking right at me. Now she turns her head slowly and speaks to the Prince. He turns quickly and answers her so that as they pass we I get a good view of his face, too. Both of them look exactly as they do in their photographs.

They're gone, followed closely by a long procession of cars holding what the radio people call "dignitaries."

Now all the people are dashing to try to beat the procession to the next turn and see them again. In a matter of minutes I'm completely deserted. My, that throng just melted. One minute there were hundreds lining both sides of the avenue before me and the next, not a single soul.

Goodness, I was so thrilled and excited as they passed, I do believe I forgot to flutter my "Welcome" sign.

A hush has fallen over the avenue and it's getting quite dark. All the neon signs are winking cheerily and it's so quiet, I think I'll start my remembering and dreaming now. I may even practice telling fairy tales. Now, how will I begin.

"Once upon a time, a beautiful Princess and her handsome consort passed this way..."

Terrific Speed

A jet plane pilot had the job of carrying a Very Important Person to New York City. After a short time in the air he turned to the big shot: "We missed New York sir. We'll have to circle back."

"How could you possibly miss a huge city like New York?" blustered the VIP.

The pilot confessed: "I blinked."

That Explains Everything

When Jones met his old friend, Smith, whom he hadn't seen in six months, he was shocked by his altered appearance. His face looked haggard, his eyes held a glossy stare, and the way his clothes draped his frame spoke eloquently of a considerable weight loss.

"Good heavens, man!" Jones

exclaimed. "Have you been ill?"
"No," Smith answered, wearily; "but my wife is on a reducing diet."
